USEFUL WORK IS BELITTLED

Fiction Lauding Wealth and Rank Encourages Snobbery, Says Writer in Socialist Review.

If one examines the ordinary novel he will find that in most cases the story glorifies—at least by implication—wealth and rank. On the other hand—at least by implication—it encourages a contempt for poverty, and, what is worse, for any form of honest, useful labor. If in the course of a tale any character appears among those who are intended to be attractive and has attributed to him any occupation by which he earns his living, it is usually a very gentlemanly one. Lawyers, artists, doctors, clergymen or stock brokers are the most frequent types.

But, while some of these callings are useful and some are not, the influence of fiction does not end with appreciating them, for it goes on to pour contempt on all others. All the persons who appear in the course of the story who fill any really indispensable office, such as agricultural laborers, fishermen, carpenters, domestic servants and mechanics are systematically belittled.

This characteristic of uselessness is an almost inevitable accompaniment to the hero and heroine in most novels. More so in the case of the heroine than the hero of course. How earnestly most writers strive to convey the impression that if at any time in the course of the story the heroine has to do any useful work, that is an indignity and an injustice. How carefully the story secures that she shall be delivered from such a position.—S. H. Halford, in the Socialist Review.

SOME DAY

Stage Manager—This is the setting for the balcony scene in "Romeo and Juliet."

Critic—But I seem to miss something. Where is the ladder?

Stage Manager—Ladder? The modern Romeo does not climb a ladder. He comes in an airship.

SCHOOL MA'AM'S WOES.

The schoolmistress in England has obstacles to be reckoned with not dreamed of by the American schoolma'am. On the opening of the school at the village of Earl Stoneham, ten miles from Ipswich, after having cycled five miles in a pouring rain, a teacher found the rector of the parish and the school managers barring her entrance though she had been chosen for the place. They wanted a man for the reason that next to the rector the schoolmaster is the most important functionary in the village. He it is who organizes all social functions, is secretary of the flower show, leads in the cricket and all the sports, looks out for the reading room, the institute, is a power in the local lodge of Odd Fellows, is clerk to the parish council and is often the collector of taxes.

FOR THE SAKE OF BREVITY.

"I heard a story in Germany," says Schmittnacht, who has just returned, "about a novelist and an editor. The editor had ordered a story of a certain length, and the novelist had written several hundred words too many. In order to make the story fit the space at his disposal the last few paragraphs were condensed into a single sentence. This is the way it read:

"Von Berken took a small glass of whisky, his hat, his departure, no notice of his pursuers, a revolver out of his pocket, and, finally, his life."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

OBSERVING CHILD.

Mother—Now go kiss nurse good night and let her put you to bed.

Little Helen—Don't want to! She says folks that try to kiss her now.

Mother—Why, what a story, Helen!

Helen—Well, you ask papa if she don't.—Dartmouth Jack o' Lantern.

Stopped Those Pains.

Copper Hill, Va.—Mrs. Ida Connor, of this place, says, "For years, I had a pain in my right side, and was very sick with womanly troubles. I tried different doctors but could get no relief. I had given up all hope of ever getting well. I took Cardui, and it relieved the pain in my side, and now I feel like a new person. It is a wonderful medicine." Many women are completely worn out and discouraged on account of a womanly trouble. Are you? Take Cardui, the woman's tonic. Its records show that it will help you. Why wait? Try it to-day. Ask your druggist about it. Advertisement.

His Version.

At an examination held in a junior school a composition on cats was set. One young hopeful wrote the following: "Cats that's made for little boys and girls to maul is called 'Maltese' cats. Some cats are known by their queer purr; these are called 'Purrlan' cats. Others with very bad tempers are known as 'Angor' cats. Cats with deep feelings are called 'Feline' cats. Very fine cats are called 'Magnificats'."

THE THRICE-A-WEEK EDITION OF THE NEW YORK WORLD

Practically a Daily at the Price of a Weekly.

No Other Newspaper in the World Gives So Much at So Low a Price.

The Democrats, for the first time in sixteen years, will have the Presidency and they will have the Presidency and they will also control both branches of Congress. The political news is sure to be of the most absorbing interest.

There is a great war in the Old World, and you may read of the extinction of the vast Turkish Empire in Europe, just as a few years ago you read how Spain lost her last foot of soil in America, after having ruled the empire of half the New World.

The World long since established a record for impartiality, and anybody can afford its Thrice-a-Week edition, which comes every other day in the week, except Sunday. It will be of particular value to you now. The Thrice-a-Week World also abounds in other strong features, serial stories, humor, markets, cartoons; in fact, everything that is to be found in a first class daily.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and the Hopkinsville Kentuckian together for one year for $2.65.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $3.00.

Eight Who Deserve Slaps.

Eight men who deserve to be slapped on the face: He who despises a man of power; he who enters a house uninvited and unwelcome; he who gives orders in a house not his own; he who takes a seat above his position; he who speaks to one who does not listen to him; he who intrudes on the conversation of others; he who seeks favors from the ungenerous; and he who expects love from his enemies.—From a Persian Saying.

POISONS IN PLANTS DO GOOD

Experiments Tend to Show That Many of Them Give Protection Against Enemies.

The part played by the powerful chemical substances secreted in the various parts of many plants is imperfectly understood. Free prussic acid, in some plants was the remarkable discovery made not long ago, and now Professor Peche has concluded that in the cherry laurel this poison is stored in various tissues as a reserve plant food. Other German biologists have been seeking to prove that various plant poisons give protection against enemies. Results have been obtained by Prof. W. Peyser tending to show that the various acids, oils, alkaloids, glucosides and other chemicals of plants are poisonous or offensive to rabbits, snails, insects and other creatures. In the pastures the plants yielding medicinal oils are avoided by both grazing and wild animals. The acid bearing plants, such as are used for human food as salads, are poisonous to snails and slugs, and are protected nearly as effectively against rabbits. Beans, peas and lentils contain some unknown poison that causes rabbits and mice to refuse the seeds until the active principle has been removed by several washings. An acid product of seedling roots—such as maize, oats and rye—repels snails, as do hairy stalks and sticky surfaces, and plants having bundles of calcium oxalate crystals are offensive or poisonous not only to rabbits and snails, but even to man.

WISE BOY

Mr. Newwed—When we were on our honeymoon trip no one could tell we were a new bride and groom.

Oldwed—How did you manage it?

Mr. Newwed—Every time we came to a tunnel I got up and got a drink of water.

OLD BRASS AND PLATE

The lucky possessor of a genuine old bit of brass, or real Sheffield plate candlestick through whose silver coat the mellow copper gleams, is often at a loss how to clean the antique without injuring. Tarnished brass or copper may be cleaned with a mixture of rottenstone, gum arabic, oxalic acid and sweet oil. Use three-fourths of a pound of rottenstone powdered, three-quarters of an ounce of gum arabic, an ounce of oxalic acid, an ounce and a half of sweet oil and just enough water to reduce the mixture to a thick paste. Rub the article well with the paste; then with a cloth, and finally with a bit of leather. Old plate should not be rubbed with a cleaning powder. Shred a pound of yellow kitchen soap into two quarts of water and add a handful of washing soda. Whip the boiling suds to a thick lather and boil each piece of silver for two minutes in the suds, rinsing afterward in clear water and then polishing with a soft bit of cotton cloth.

CONDEMN THE MUSTACHE.

English doctors who grow mustaches once ran the risk of spoiling their practice. G. W. E. Russell, in "One Look Back," remarks: "Quite certainly the first time I ever fell into the hands of a mustached doctor was in 1877. Everyone condemned the hirsute appendage as highly unprofessional and when soon after the poor man found his way into a lunatic asylum, neighboring doctors were not surprised, that there was a bad family history, and that he himself had shown signs of eccentricity. That meant the mustache and nothing else."

SURE FACT.

"This couple want their wedding chronicled as a marriage in high life."

"How do they make that out?"

"They were married in an airship."
